COPERNICUS ~ No Borderline Nevermore

Although a friend described this as "haunting", the words that came instantly to my mind were

"pretentious swill". Bad poetry recited over nondescript music, this stuff just grates on my nerves. I can see myself tolerating some of this in smaller doses, but this CD is almost 50 minutes - which is about 45 minutes too long. Copernicus, who fancies himself a philosopher, bases the majority of his lyrics on the concept that "nothing exists". It would be nice to believe that some things don't exist -

this disc, for example. Alas, every time I check, it's still there. (There is, however, the distinct possibility that this guy is a genius who is way ahead of his time, and I'm just too narrow-minded and ignorant to fully appreciate his pioneering work... Naaah.)
