

COPERNICUS -NO BORDERLINE -
CD (Nevermore, Inc.) Copernicus is a poet with a vision. This vision is centered on his search for understanding and communicating his own personal philosophy, (which is as far as I can tell) about how reality and nothing are one and the same. Sure it seems quite complicated at first, but with the mostly minimalistic background music that accompanies him, it comes off more like the soundtrack for a intellectual space opera instead. The different tracks are culled from various live and studio recordings, so there's a lot of subtle differences between each piece. Especially the ones backed by the Mexican waltz and his live band in Germany. Copernicus has a intense and clear voice which keeps the whole CD cohesive and although some of his ideas are rather abstract, I still find them rather fascinating. -gg
