

Copernicus wants you to come to his non-existent show to listen with your non-existent ears to his non-existent philosophy and ponder with your non-existent minds his belief that nothing exists beyond the atomic level. That's right, since all matter is made up of ricocheting atoms, nothing exists beyond the nano-second. I think. In any case, the Brooklyn landlord is a performance poet of cult proportions and will bring his joyride into the void of Stache's October 9. Although his latest release, No Borderline, features 26 musicians ranging from electronics to a marimba band, Copernicus tours with only a keyboard and his emotional voice. Rounding out the bill are hometown favorites Howlin' Maggie and performance poet Leni Anderson. For ticket info, call 263-5318.
